Talk about fine goods, both foreign and domestic, the citizens of Tombstone should call and see the fine stock just received by Harris, Tombstone's popular tailor. Mr. Harris has an experienced buyer in the east and in California who purchases nothing but the finest goods and the latest fashions. Call and examine them at his fashionable tailoring emporium in Bottini block, Allen street, 5-14-15.

Readers of The Tombstone will remember the passage through this city about two weeks since of about thirty Apache scouts, in charge of a sergeant en route for Fort Bowie, where they were to be discharged. Now comes the news that after discharge they were started for the San Carlos agency at which point neither the scouts nor sergeant have yet arrived, and fears are entertained that after killing the officer in charge, the scouts skipped out and joined Geronimo.

The children of the late Michael Costello and wife who died in Tombstone about a year ago, have erected a handsome monument over their grave in the City Cemetery. The shaft in addition to the name, age, etc., of the deceased, bears the insignia of the A. O. U. W., and Select Knights, of which Mr. Costello was an honored member. The apex of the monument proper is surmounted by an urn, the whole forming a striking picture. The material is of Italian marble, and was designed by the Graham Bros. of McPherson, Kansas.

Judge Zulick's Court.

Ex-Surrogate Zulick, of New Jersey, chief executive of Arizona, donned his judicial ermine this morning at ten o'clock to sit as a tribunal to hear the case against the insane asylum directors, in which he appears in the dual role of prosecuting witness and judge. Directors Lincoln and Hatch were present in person and were also represented by their attorneys, Judge Edwards and J. C. Herndon. The complaint and judge was represented by counsel, A. C. Baker, of Phoenix. A demurrer was entered by Judge Edwards on behalf of the directors, and was exhaustively and eloquently argued by him, when an adjournment was had until nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

The argument of Judge Edwards was a masterly effort and showed that he fully understood the law bearing on the same. It was replete with sound logic and consisted of a thorough review of the authorities touching the subject. His argument lasted nearly two hours, and was confined to two propositions, namely:

First—Has the Governor, under the Organic Act of this Territory, any judicial power, and can he perform the functions of a trial judge and by a decree remove the respondents from a responsible office of trust?

Second—Can the Governor in any case where the tenure of office is fixed by law, remove the incumbent therefrom before the expiration of his term?

He reviewed the common law of England and cited many authorities showing that the king could not remove persons from office, even where the theory of the British government was that the king was all powerful, and that every officer was considered his deputy. He claimed that section 12, chapter 13, of the Compiled Laws, was in direct conflict with the spirit and intent of the Organic Act of the territory.

That the judicial power was vested in the Supreme Court and such inferior Courts as the Legislative Council may by law prescribe, and that any act of the legislature conferring powers of a judicial character on the executive was null and void, and contained no binding force. That such an act was contrary to the spirit of a free government and outrageously arbitrary in its character. He cited many American cases sustaining his views and challenged the production of any authority holding to the contrary. The argument of Judge Edwards, and the authorities cited by him, appear to us to be unanswerable. Hon. A. C. Baker, who appears for the Governor, asked until to-morrow morning to read over the authorities cited by Judge Edwards so as to make the reply. Judge J. C. Herndon will make the closing argument for the respondents. As soon as the reporter has his notes written up we will publish the argument in full.—Journal-Miner.

The Boundary Line.

A correspondent of the Tucson Citizen sends that journal the following communication under date of May 10, 1886.

County Surveyor Geo. J. Roskrug and party came into the Babicorari valley this morning; they have brought the boundary line to a point about one-fourth of a mile east of Lurty's ranch. It will leave the Igo ranch at the point of the Huachuca mountains, about one-half mile in Pima county. The line runs across the Babicorari valley at the El Chino, which marks the initial point of the land grant covering the valley. The standard line of the public surveys was run through this valley about a year ago, and the township corner between ranges 18 and 19 east, settled the matter as to what county Lurty's ranch was in. The old McGary, now the Perin ranch, is at least one and one-half miles in Pima county. The line passed about one-half mile east of Bear spring, located at the extreme south end of the Whetstone mountains. The party saw one armed Indian, but he did not attempt to molest them. They saw several fresh moose tracks near Bear Springs, but as there were no soldiers in the vicinity they felt perfectly safe. They left to-day, going toward the Huachuca.

The open air drill of the K. of P. this evening, promises to attract a large audience.

A Young Logician.

Most of our readers know Master Frank Prescott, the little five year old son of the manager of the Western Union Telegraph office in this camp. That the young gentleman, has the embryo symptoms of a logician is evidenced by the following. A few days since, a reporter of The Tombstone, while passing down Fifth street, noticed Master Frank sitting in front of the telegraph office intently watching a group of Papago Indians, who were camped in the vacant lot opposite. Among the group was a herculean buck, who was perched on the steps leading to Meagher's club room. As the reporter passed he accosted Frank.

"Better look out Frank that big buck is liable to come over here and take your scalp, or carry you off, you know Indians always like to capture little boys."

"Oh, no," said Frank, "that is a good Indian."

"How do you know," said the reporter, wondering how the juvenile had learned to distinguish a good Indian from a bad one."

"Because the young Papago," my mamma told me, that whenever anybody had anything nice, and gave some of it to somebody else, it showed that they were good, and not selfish. That big Indian over there has been up in front of the fruit store, two or three times, and every time he finds a rotten apple or orange, he comes right back and gives some of it to his sisters, and I know he is a good Indian. If he was a bad Indian, he would eat it all himself."

The logic was unanswerable, and the reporter levittied.

Indian News.

From Mr. C. R. Ayers, who arrived from Sonora to-day, The Tombstone learns that on Wednesday evening last a courier arrived in Santa Cruz, a small town about twelve miles south of Magdalena, with the news that the Apaches had killed five Mexicans, wounded a number of others, and run off about forty head of stock, between that point and Altar. This communication confirms the news published in The Tombstone yesterday. Mr. Ayers further states that on the trail coming up he met a soldier, en route to Fort Huachuca, who stated, that one of the U. S. cavalry troops now chasing the hostiles had come upon an abandoned camp a day or two since and there found a girls hat, and on the ground in the immediate vicinity the imprint of a small sized American lady's boot. The inference drawn was that the hat and garter marks belonged to the young niece of Al Peck, whom it will be remembered was abducted a couple of weeks since. This would seem to indicate that the girl had not yet been murdered by her ruthless captors, but reserved, if not rescued for a far worse fate.

TELEGRAPHIC

Joined the Church.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—In his sermon to-day on the "Pearl of great price," Dr. Bartlett of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church related an incident that had created great interest. Dr. Bartlett's church is located near the great hotels and is only two blocks from the White House. It is always well filled and there is a considerable number of strangers present. The doctor said that a few weeks ago a middle aged gentleman called upon him at his residence and requested an interview on an important personal matter. The gentleman insisted on showing a large number of endorsements and letters in order that the doctor might be convinced that he was not an impostor. These letters were from the two senators, the governor and the leading members of congress from the gentleman's state and recommended him very strongly to the president for appointment to a leading diplomatic position. He said that he had attended the New York Avenue Church, and had been convinced that he ought to be a Christian. He had simply dropped into the church to pass away an idle hour and had heard the gospel presented in such a manner as to win his heart. His family were Baptists. He had all ways lived in the southern states, from which he had come to seek the appointment. Dr. Bartlett said that he advised the gentleman to join the Baptist church of this town but the man insisted that he desired to be a Presbyterian only he wanted to be immersed. Dr. Bartlett said that he would immerse him but finally he was called suddenly home. He however soon came to Cincinnati where a prominent clergyman baptized him. The gentleman was soon after offered the position he sought, but declined it. He is contented now to stay at home. The question is, who is the politician and can other office-seekers be cured as easy.

Convicts on Government Work

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Secretary of the State-keepers Union at Minneapolis telegraphed Congressman O'Neil to-day that the contractors for Stone work on the Federal building had sub-let work to a firm employing convicts at Joliet. The matter was at once reported to the treasury department and it was announced in reply that the department did not recognize any sub-contractor and hence could not interfere unless the principle contractor employed convicts. This ruling will have the effect to hasten action on the now pending bill reported from Mr. O'Neil's committee. The proposed legislation is sweeping. The bill prohibits the use of any material product of convict labor in government buildings.

Secretary, Manning's Successor

BALTIMORE, May 13.—Intimate friends of Minister Robert M. McLane believe that he will be Secretary Manning's successor. The influence of Mr. Tilden was exerted in favor of Mr. McLane for the secretaryship of the treasury last year and it is thought that the voice of the sage of Greystone will be listened to more readily now. If given his choice between a cabinet office and a foreign mission Mr. McLane would undoubtedly choose the former. His friends do not make any concealment of the fact that it has been Mr. McLane's ambition to be a member of a Democratic administration and it would give him pleasure to be selected to the same office which his father was called upon to fill by a Democratic president.
